The State of Ohio has had much experience with Government Ownership. She owns the canals; and for years they have been the subject of political graft and controversy. Now she proposes to abandon the entire canal system of the state and sell the property to the highest bidder.

The Pennsylvania Railway officials might have taken up the Pittsburgh Editors' passes without insulting them—placing them in the class with "politicians." No wonder the Smoky City Editors have given orders to "blue pencil" all complimentary notices of the Pennsylvania's officials, and to print only the public's side of all railway happenings, including wrecks.

In his Message to the Legislature Governor BROOKHAM makes one recommendation that ought to be adopted—

"In the matter of carrying concealed deadly weapons, a misdemeanor, so fruitful of felonies, I advise that you amend the law in such a way as to increase the penalty beyond the reach even of Executive clemency, and I shall show how it may be done. It is exceedingly hard for the Governor in these cases to refuse to pardon the imprisonment part of the penalty. As the law now is, when the Governor grants a pardon for any part or all of the penalty, the applicant has to pay to the state a tax of $4 on the pardon, which the Governor cannot remit. I advise that the tax be at least $100, and when you do so rest assured that there will be a wonderful reduction in the number of pistols carried."

HON. THOMAS H. PAYNTER, who will succeed Mr. BLACKBURN in the Senate, was born in Lewis county, December 19th, 1851. He served three terms in Congress and is a member of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. His early education was acquired in the Lewis County Public Schools, which was supplemented by study in the Rand Academy on Kinnicknick and later by a course at Center College, Danville. He was admitted to the Bar in 1873, and was County Attorney of Greenup for several years. He was a member of the Fifty-first Congress and twice re-elected, serving from 1889 until 1895. In 1894 Judge PAYNTER was elected to the Appellate Court and was re-elected in 1900.

Nutmeg National Bank

How many men have started in business on "hot air," kiting checks to even pay their first month's rent, and some of these very men have been successful and have made independent fortunes? Then, again, how many have failed to make good? Of the average American business men seven out of one hundred only are successful; the other ninety-three go to the wall.

But who ever heard of a National Bank being started on "hot air?" But one was started in a prosperous town in Connecticut, and in now one of the most successful in the Nutmeg State. The head of the Bank was a "buster," who formerly had been Cashier of another Bank in the same place, but who, on account of some disagreement with the directors, had resigned his position. He knew every business man and farmer of means in the neighborhood, and he was known by them in turn to be a very shrewd and trustworthy man.

After resigning the original cashiership he resolved to start a new Bank under a National charter, with himself, of course, as Cashier, and the way he started it was unique and amusing. When he approached a person for a subscription to the stock of the new Bank, and the person was invariably one whose credit was A1, he first said, "Now, my dear boy, I do not want a single dollar in cash from you; all I want is your note at three, six and nine months," and these he would get discounted at a Boston Bank, which had agreed to act as the Boston correspondent of his Bank.

With the proceeds of these notes the new Bank would at once take out circulation, and when the notes became due the Bank would take them up and the makers would renew them as long as they pleased at the new Bank. The scheme worked to a charm. That Cashier had no trouble in negotiating the notes of the subscribers to the Bank stock, and with the proceeds at once purchased Government bonds and took out National Bank note circulation, so that when the notes for the Bank stock fell due he had the cash on hand to pay them off and to renew them for the makers at the newly started Bank.

Each subscriber to the Bank stock, too, finding the project likely to be a success, began to take a personal interest and pride in the institution, and not only deposited his own surplus funds in it, but induced neighbors and acquaintances to do likewise.

Within two years the Bank began to pay dividends, and today there is no more flourishing institution of its kind in Connecticut. That Bank was virtually started on "paper and hot air."

ILL-ADVISED STATUES.
Other states have deceased matchless leaders and premature statue positions. The overzealous friends of the late William Goebel of Kentucky want to have his statue placed in the Capitol at Washington at the expense of the state of Kentucky, to represent that commonwealth in the National Hall of Fame.

Goebel was a Pennsylvanian by birth, and he engraved on the Democratic party of Kentucky a reckless courage and a total lack of moral scruple that gave it success by force and fraud, not by vote, and alienated from it many lifelong Democrats whose instincts were too honorable for comfortable association with the followers and imitators of William Goebel. These protect against the mockery and shame of the state of Henry Clay sending Goebel's statue to Washington to represent the statesmanship of Kentucky.

The Owensboro (Ky.) Inquirer makes this protest against the Goebel statue proposition—
"William Goebel possessed not a single characteristic of the great man, except determination to achieve his ends. Let us hear no more of Goebel in this connection. If his worshippers want to continue their idolatry, much of which is as insincere as Goebel was insincere, let them do it, but let not the great majority of the people of Kentucky suffer for their idolatry."

Goebel's friends who thus revive the memory of the dark chapters in his life are doing him no kindness. Public men who gain an ill fame in their lives are best served after their death by silence and forgetfulness. This is true both in Kentucky and Pennsylvania.
